Charter

Southern Refugee Legal Advocacy Network (SRLAN)

Vision

In countries around the world, there are increasing numbers of new organizations and programs aimed at provided rights-based advocacy for refugees. Many of these programs focus on legal aid and counseling, while others are concerned with research, monitoring and policy advocacy. All such organizations are bound by a common desire to root refugee assistance in human rights and international law.

These rights-based organization have often been unique within their own countries and isolated from each other internationally. Organization face common challenges, but opportunities to learn from each other's experiences are not fully developed. At a global level, refugee advocacy is dominated by large humanitarian agencies. But slowly and informally, rights-based refugee organizations have been increasing their cooperation, information sharing and coordinated advocacy.

This charter is initiated in hopes of transforming the disparate refugee rights organizations into a global movement to expand and improve the protection of refugees in parts of the world where focus on refugee rights has been lacking. To implement this vision, this network of organizations will work collaboratively and in concert to strengthen and expand our rights bases refugee advocacy and legal aid both globally and locally.

Network Principles

1. We are dedicated to the principle that refugees are first and foremost people with rights.

2. We take our inspiration from the great achievements in advancing the legal and rights of refugees in many countries. We recognize with regret that global development of rights based advocacy for refugees has been uneven,. In many places, refugees are still treated primarily as passive victims with endless needs, rather than as people with rights.

3. We act out of the conviction that desperate needs usually stem from the deprivation of human rights and that refugees have rights everywhere.

Mission

4. We address ourselves to any institution, government, inter-government agency or non-government organization that has the power to affect refugees' enjoyment of their rights.
5. We form this network in order to combine our efforts on issues of common concern and to share as possible our resources. We work internally among ourselves to promote the highest standards for professional skill and ethics in our work.

Methods

6. Our work is based at all times on the rights guaranteed to refugees in law, beginning with but not limited to the Universal Declaration of Human Rights and the 1951 Convention Relating to the Status of Refugees.

7. Collectively, we work both on individual cases and on public advocacy. We work as needed through information gathering, counseling, education and public information, provision and promotion of legal aid, public communication and promoting the enactment and ratification of treaties and laws that expand or implement the rights of refugees. Our member organizations commit themselves to assist both the network and fellow members of the network to carry out these responsibilities.

8. We also develop codes and guidelines of professional conduct, for example, the Nairobi Code of 2007, in order to maintain the standards of our own work. Our member organizations commit themselves to maintaining professional and ethical standards and to assisting other members and the network as a whole to do so as well.

Activities

9. As members of the network, we engage in the following activities in Africa, the Middle East, Asia and Latin America.

10. Work in concert for the adoption of international treaties that guarantee and expand the rights of refugees.

   10.1 Promote the adoption of domestic legislation that takes a rights-based approach to ensuring the safety and well-being of refugees.
